Paris Theatres in War Times.

An English correspondent writes thus of the Palais-Royal troupe and of the Hanlon brothers, date, the end of August:

In the afternoon I went to secure a stall at the Palais Royal, and was naively told I might have my choice, there being eighty-eight out of a hundred to let. My object in coming to the theatre has been rather to see the spectators than the actors, and in the first entr'acte I amuse myself by counting how many we are in the house. I find we are sixty-one, including myself, and most of us are of the ugly sex, the ladies forming a contingent of only sixteen. I fancy the actors are guagging their parts pretty freely, for the winsome Mille. Georgette Olivier and that inimitable trio—MM. Hyacinthe, Gil-Peres, and Lassouche—are making jokes about the Prussians, which were assuredly never contemplated by poor Lambert-Thiboust who wrote the piece. Surely Providence dealt kindly by Frenchmen when she gave them the faculty of laughing with the enemy at only five days' march from their gates! After the fall of the curtain, at the close of the first act of Le Supplice d'un Homme (parody on M. de Girardin's famous Supplice d'une Femme), a critic of one of the morning dailies strolls in. He is on the free list, and comes in at half-past nine with the intention of going away at ten and seeing something else. "Have you ever been into the green-room?" he asks, after the inevitable exchange of queries as to the position of Bazaine and the prospects of McMahon. "Not here," I answer; "I have at the Francais." "Well, will you come and see?" he rejoins; "it will be more amusing than sitting here." And, being at home in the place, he leads me through the crush-room to a private door, and thence up a terribly break-neck staircase into a room some fifteen feet by ten, occupied by almost the entire troupe of MM. Plunkett and Dormeuil. I cannot vouch that it was "more amusing;" it seemed to me rather like introducing into a private room where a score of ladies and gentlemen were discussing family matters, but my critical acquaintance explained that going behind the scenes was one of the privileges of his calling, and that he was always welcome, which I found to be true enough. Not much jesting among the comics, but great dismay on the part of M. Hyacinthe, who, as far as I could gather, lives at Asnieres, and was in a sad way about having to transport his household goods to the capital and abandon his villa to the mercies of the foe. The chief preoccupation of another actor appeared to be the fall of 1 franc 55 centimes on the Three per Cent. that afternoon, and the ladies were talking about the spy Harth who had been shot in the morning at the Ecole Militaire. I confess from such pretty lips I expected to hear some word of sympathy for a poor devil who had been hurried out of existence on the slender testimony of having only four sous in his purse and having written to his father to say that French peasants seemed to have had enough of war. But the ladies were not in a merciful mood, and it was only on my remarking that this M. Harth had died like a stoic that one of them so far yielded to her woman's nature as to exclaim: "C'est peut etre triste tout de meme, Monseur; mais, vous savez, a la guerre comme a la guerre, On ne fusillerait jamais personne si on se laissait attendrir." This is only too true, mademoiselle.

On leaving the green room of the Palais Royal, my companion, the critic, suggested going to the Palais Alhambra at the Chatelet to see two gentlemen without backbones, throw a small boy at one another from the top of a trapeze. I have never been particularly fond of seeing humanity converted into a tennis ball, but having made up my mind not to return home till daybreak it was of no great moment where I spent my time; so until 11:30 I joined my French friend in wondering how much suffering the unfortunate little Hanlon must have gone through before bringing himself to resemble a shuttlecock, and, in another field of ideas, how long it would take before the talented Mr. Mokes dislocated his right leg. By the way, at a time when such a general tendency exists on the other side of the Channel to crv down British actors at the expense of French, it is curious to note the enthusiasm of Parisian playgoers at the consciencious, painstaking character of English acting. This remark was already made four years ago by M. Theophile Gautier, when an English troupe came over to play Our American Cousin, and it has just been repeated in terms of warmest praise by M. Edouard Cadol, critic of the Soir, and author of Les Inutiles. His experience is that English comedians do not try to cut each other out, as appears to be the brotherly practice of the French stage. They are content to play their parts, each of them to be the best of his or her abilities; and throughout all their performance, be it acting, singing, jig-dancing or tumbling, there is an honest wish to please the public, such as one too seldom witnesses in French actors, whose main object is generally to please themselves. M. Cadol adds very truly that a French comedian proper would think himself derogating if he were to turn somersaults or otherwise play the gymnast; and that if he once deigned to stoop so low there would be such an air of condescension in his performance as to be absolutely oppressive to his audience. An English writer would have scrupled to make these observations for fear of being taxed with discourtesy; but one may accept the compliment with gratitude from a Frenchman.

The Fallen Dynasty.

LE SOIR'S ACCOUNT OF NAPOLEON'S SURRENDER.

A correspondent of the Soir gives the following account of the surrender of the Emperor to the King of Prussia:—Listen! This is a page of history. Napoleon having written to the King of Prussia the letter with which you are acquainted, William replied: Let him come himself, and he will be treated simply as a soldier, although he does not deserve it." Napoleon then went, in the manner already described, to the homestead where the King had established his headquarters. The carriage having arrived at the door of the cottage, Napoleon stepped out, extinguished his cigarette, and entered alone into the lower chamber, where the King, dressed in the uniform of a General, and helmeted, was restlessly pacing up and down, with his hands crossed behind his back. The Crown Prince and the other great officers were grouped together in a corner of the apartment. A gloomy silence prevailed. The Emperor took his hat in his hand, and saluted the King in German. William responded neither by word nor gesture. He took one or two more steps, and then he came and placed himself fiercely in front of the Emperor, who stood bending forward, and with his head uncovered. "Sire," said the latter, still speaking in German, "I come to repeat in person what I had the honor of transmitting to your Majesty last evening in writing." "It is well, Sire," replied the King, whose face was very red, and whose voice hissed so much that he made efforts to control himself. "I have decided that Spandau shall be assigned to you for a prison—for a residence," he said, correcting himself. "You will await my further orders. "Sire," commenced the Emperor—"I have spoken, Sir," exclaimed the King, striking his sword on the sanded floor of the room. "Au revoir, donc, Monsieur, mon frere," said the Emperor, this time speaking in French. He then saluted the different personages in the most courteous fashion, and left the room as calmly as though he had come to preside over the opening of the Chambers. On getting outside, he took out a cigarette, which he lit from the cigar of a white cuirassier, and was about to enter his carriage, when a General officer came to him from the King, begging him to go into a neighboring court-yard, where the King, as soon as he was ready, desired to speak longer with him, and would seek him there. The Ex-Emperor did not say a word. Escorted by two white cuirassiers, he passed into a court-yard, where, near to a pond, he found a little wooden bench. Tranquilly seating himself upon this bench, he continued to smoke, only interrupting himself to look at the water, and at the officer, who stood bolt upright, carefully watching all his movements. After having waited a quarter of an hour, the Ex-Emperor asked the officer, in French, to give him a glass of water. One of the cuirassiers brought it to him. He moistened his lips; then looking at the contents of the glass, he silently smiled, and, turning to the officer, said: "Nero, when conquered, passed his last hours beside a pool, of which he drank. I am more fortunate than he." He then drank off the water, and returning the glass, added: "It is true, my reign never resembled his." And he recommenced smoking. After waiting a long half-hour, a general officer came from the King, and requested him to go back into the chamber, where he would find King William by himself. They remained together alone for about an hour and a half, conversing in a low tone. What did they say? At the conclusion of the interview the ex-Emperor entered a post-chaise bearing the arms of King William, and took the route to Luxembourg, going toward Cassel, from whence he will proceed to Spandau.

End of the Pope's Temporal Power.

From the N. Y. Evening Post.

It is like reading a page from the annals of a past century to note in the telegrams from Europe that the Pope has retired to the castle of St. Angelo for safety, while hostile armies are closing around Rome. It recalls the days of Clement VII., when that wonderful genius and sad reprobate Benvenuto Cellini, the famous modeller in gold and silver, defended the same castle against the besieging forces of the Constable Bourbon. But times are changed, and we cannot believe that the Papal troops can make anything more than a feeble defence against the King of Italy.

The temporal power of the Pope seems now, indeed, to be in articulo mortis. When Rome falls, all his authority over the States of the Church, or even within the limits of the Eternal City itself, is at an end. His spiritual dominion may endure, but the pomp and state of the Vatican and Quirinal, the Swiss guard, the trappings and environments of prelates and Cardinals and that pitiable and hopeless maladministration which made the Corso and the Ripetta unsafe after dark and cast a blight over the fields of the Campagna—all these so sharply treated by Edmond About in his "Question Romaine," will have passed away when another flag is raised upon St. Angelo's battlements.

It is a striking fact, that will not be consoling to His Holiness in the hour of his humiliation, that his temporal sovereignty is wrested from him by the monarch whom he excommunicated. But the interference of the King of Italy is, in point of fact, in the interest of order, and the Pope might well be thankful for it. The popular element of the States of the Church waited but the withdrawal of the French troops to throw off the Papal domination, and it might have been that a revolution within the walls could not be conducted without injury to the treasures of art and the inestimable architectural monuments of Rome, which will now, let us hope, be preserved.

Women Physicians in Paris.

The career of women in the study of medicine is opening up in France with increasing freedom newly-afforded opportunities and an amount of sanction which, although by no means general; is strong where it exists. Scarcely anywhere are the rights of women so ridiculed and scouted, yet in practice women hold more masculine sway, and bear more masculine burthens and responsibilities than in any other country. Among the peasantry, the women are the tetes fortes; and if the wife's supremacy is not acknowledged in the notary's office, she at least has it all her own way at home, where, indeed, she is the only one to systematize and think. Then in the shop-keeping class it is the woman who has the sharp eye for business, undertakes the books, and arranges for the childrens' future. Her rights in the practice of the healing art bid fair to be vindicated. Duruy, a short time ago, Minister of Public Instruction; Husson, who directs the Assistance Publique; the great surgeon Nealton, and Minnie Edwards, the professor and writer of natural history, have submitted to the Empress the plans for the organization of a free school of medicine for women. The scheme is the Empress's, one which she likes and and interests herself in immensely, and is founded on reasons which render it a most excellent and useful reform. There are, it seems twenty seven thousand communes in France (some including several villages), in which neither doctors nor apothecarics reside, and in nearly all these there are Sisters of Charity, who not only repair as nurses to the bedside of the sick, but keep their stock of medicines and remedies, and are regularly called upon for advice and prescriptions, which they dispense to the best of their powers. This system, arising from necessity, is so natural that it might well tend to increase the opinion that it is good for women to learn medicine, and above all, some branches of it. It is evident that it would be a cruelty to many to interdict the aid these Sisters afford to the sick, and yet such practice of medicine is illegal and fraught with dangers. What remains, then, but to render it trustworthy by study and properly established laws? In Paris even similar circumstances exist; in the suburban quarter of Ternes inhabited by numbers belonging to the humbler classes, a community of nuns act as dentists and wound-dressers to the poor. A dispensary is established in the convent, and the sisters apply blisters, diachylon, and bandages, and extract teeth with a vigor of wrist perfectly marvelous. All these remedies are afforded gratuitously; and not only the indigent have recourse to them, but many in easy circumstances carrying an aching took or wounded hand to the sisters, and drop at parting an offering of money into the convent tronc, whose contents are fully needed in that healing establisment. Attached to the female school of medicine will be a separate one for forming women doctors, for the French colonies in Algeria, where the men practioners are not admitted into the native families.

Singular Story of the Lost Jewel of Louis XVI.

The Courier des Etats Unis supplies several additional particulars to the account given by the Public, of Paris, of the missing treasure of Louis XVI. The coffer which contained the jewels and title deeds was richly chased and was removed from the chatean of Mendon during the night of the sixteenth of January, 1793, by four persons of distinction, intimate friends of Louis XVI, and Marie Antoinette. With the assistance of some servants it was carried in a chariot to the confines of the forest of Bondy, and thence by strength of arm to a clump of trees, where a deep hole had been prepared, then it was covered with lead to preserve it from rust, placed in the hole, and covered with earth. The actors in this nocturnal expedition doubtless thought they would be able after a while to come back after the treasure and carry it to a sure place; but they were tracked and taken, condemned and put to death, with the exception of one of the party, who succeeded in escaping from the party. The survivor was a serving man. Twenty years afterward he returned to France, and the first thing he did was to go to the forest of Bondy and searc royal chest, the place of whose ment had been designated by benc out in the ground at the time buried. But he had not gone fa forest before he found that he r nounce the hope of finding the ch the changes which had taken place aspect of the locality made it absolu possible to identify it. He was o with disappointment, and lived w with the thought that somewhere him lay an immense fortune, th ence of which was known to hi and not knowing whether he ough veal the grand secret to any one At last, on his death-bed, he deta to speak out. A female relative the confidant of his secret, and she to the administration of lands for ity to make search for the ches authority was granted, together w promise of a large indemnity in success. But this search could not ried on publicly; it would not do the attention of others to it, whose would certainly be excited. Ther was hushed in silence and sle man, the sole person employed the soil of the forest by means o ger. But one night a laborer name surprised the old man at his my work and he sat to work on his count. Accident threw into his manuscript whose existence was un and it appears that this document ted the precise locality of the ch consequence of this discovery Fau solicite authority to prosecute the but the administration of lands re grant it, alleging that it has spent francs already in the matter. I petition has been presented to th legislatif for its intervention. It hoped the valuable papers at all will be discovered.

Favre and Bismarck.

NEW YORK, Sept 21

The World's London special telegraphs that a Cabinet meeting was held this evening, but adjourned after waiting till ten o'clock in vain for news of the result of the result of the interview between Jules Favre and Count Bismarck Nothing positive had been attained, but dispatches received early in the evening here intimate that Bismarck had manifested a disposition to recede from his extreme demands, and that he will induce the King to consent to treat with the Provisional Government as soon as its powers shall have been confirmed by a Constitutional Assembly He objects, however, to an armistice There is no longer any doubt that Russia has made what amounts to a positive threat that she will not permit territorial aggrandisement of Germany, this was confirmed to me from the highest quarters, and as to the attitude of Russia, taken in connection with the growing indignation of the English people and the course of Gladstone's Government, peace must be attributed, if peace is now reached The Russian fleets are fitting for sea at Cronstadt, and as I have repeatedly notified you that the Russian armies on the Polish frontier are ready to assume the offensive at once if necessary

Opinions of London Journals.

LONDON, Sept. 21

Ridiculed.

LONDON, Sept 21

The Times ridicules the protest of Bishop Coxe, of Western New York, against the mode of the proposed revision of the Bible, and says his arguments practically oppose any revision whatever

Prussians Checked.

A special to the World says the Prussians sustained a very serious check yesterday in the third attempt to cut the line of the Orleans Railroad., After their repulse at Inveray, and before the fort of Inveray, they yesterday undertook to force a passage and secure control of the line They were met in their advance from Canbeil upon the main trunk of the Orleans line, at the Hamlet of Wissons, a village commanded by low hills, and buried in the woods by the French The Prussian column of thirty thousand men was encountered by a French force of about an equal number, and posted in the most advantageous position, and with formidable artillery

The engagement was extremely severe, and lasted nearly six hours. A fresh column of nearly 20,000 Prussians came up after the battle had gone on three hours and attempted, by a flank movement, to enter the woods. The slaughter here was fearful

The masked batteries of French mitrailleuses kept up a terrible fire on the cavalry and infantry of the Prussians which were decimated and repulsed along the whole line They finally fell back in disorder hotly pursued by the French who cut off their retreat upon Corbeil and the Essonne, and drove them down the main line of the Orleans road more than three miles through the Savignay and Epinay sewerage and back about a mile and a half upon the village of Monepery, where a fierce stand was made in the Burgundan cemetery The Prussians were here routed and driven in disorder back toward their main body being compelled to evacuate Corbeil at the same time and reconcentrate upon Mulen This victory clears for the present the Orleans line, which is the only communication between Paris and the Provinces now open Flying parties of Prussians have succeeded in cutting all other roads at points more or less remote from Paris, and in every case they caused proclamations in French to be distributed denouncing death to all working parties attempting to repair the mischief done

Paris is abundantly provisioned for more than two months Bread is now no dearer than before the siege Bacon and meat is cheaper This result is naturally from three causes diminution of the number of consumers, over 330,000 persons having left Paris during the last fortnight from the adoption of rigid economy by families and citizens, and from reorganizations under active discipline of the Commissarate of the troops by Gen Trochu

Trochu has introduced in the garrison a sternness of discipline not known in the French army for years, and with results already visible in the perfect order of the city, the bearing of the soldiers, and the general high spirit which prevails in the metropolis There is much alarm, however, among the shop-keeping classes at the arming of the working classes, which Trochu is carrying out under a full understanding with the chiefs of all the societies of working men

A special from Berlin telegraphs that the forces now assembled before Paris number 400,000 men, and that Prince Frederick Charles has over 150 000 between Metz and Rheims

Advices from Namur say that the pestilence of Sedan is spreading throughout the invading armies It is aggravated by the water of the limestone districts, and the troops, not inured to campaign life, are suffering fearfully This state of things is made far worse by the dreadful rain showers and prematurely chill and damp weather

Great dissatisfaction is openly expressed in Northern Germany at the treatment of General Von Steinmetz, who is thought to have been sacrificed as too popular

Government Order.

TOURS Sept 21

The Government has ordered all the troops in all parts of the country to converge on Paris

It is rumored that the Prussians have entered Orleans

The following dispatches received by the Ministry

COLMAN, Sept 20

Pugilistic.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21

An impromptu pugilistic encounter of interest to the public took place yesterday morning on the stage of the Grand Opera House The gladiators were Col Jas Fisk, Jr and Max Maretzek who has been acting as manager of Col Fisk's Opera Bouffe Company, and at the same time, had been negotiating with Strakosh for Mlle Nilsson at Steinway Hall The casus belli was the application of the terms bar and chief to Maretzek by Col. Fisk during an interview in which Fisk expressed his indignation that the manager should have connected himself with an opposition show Three rounds were fought, and the Colonel was badly punished, but not so much as to prevent his appearance in a box at the theatre last evening in company he maintained the fatal marks of the scrimmage in the morning in the evening Maretzek took possession of another box on the opposite side of the house, and the champions scrowled at each other through their glasses our reporter early in the day sought out Maretzek and obtained his statement of the affair, I have had charge of all the business of arranging the Operas of the Grand Opera House, and my arrangement with Fisk did not specify I should not conduct at a concert, I tried to get Fisk to come to a definite understanding about my engagement for the season, but he put me off and never kept his appointments with me, and he put my name on his circulars as musical director, he didn't like the idea of Nilsson's coming at all, because he did not bring her, and when I conducted her first concert threatened to settle me, I tried very hard to get him to put the entire management of the musical season at the Grand Opera House in my hands, as he had advertised me as director, but he not only put me off with vague promises, but interfered with members of the troupe to such an extent that I began to doubt the success of the Bouffe enterprise and his desire to do any more with Opera Bouffe than to have his little fun out of it He took the first prima donna and exhibited her round the theater during rehearsals, when she was wanted on the stage When I remonstrated with him he said, 'Well, don't I pay for it When I went to conduct rehearsals this morning he insulted me by calling me a chief and a liar before the whole company, for which I knocked him down That's all there is about it The stage manager kicked me in the face when I was down and he will be legally called to account for it What Fisk wanted to do with me was to drive me round like his four in hand It could not be done with such an old bird I didn't object to his buying houses and furnishing them for all the prima donnas and the employes in the bargain, why should I if the Erie stockholders didn't, but then he interfered in rehearsals and trumped up a silly charge of theft against me because I conducted Nilsson's concert, when I got mad Another unlooked for scene occurred yesterday P M at the rehearsal of a new opera bouffe company at the Grand Opera House Max Maretzek the well known impresario had been engaged, it appears, by Fisk as conductor of the Montland and opera bouffe company On Monday night he appeared at Steinway Hall as leader of the orchestra of the Nilsson company Yesterday he visited the Grand Opera House to conduct the musical part of the Opera Bouffe rehearsal the company had assembled and Maretzek was about to wave his baton as a signal for the commencement of the magic strains when James Fisk, Jr, dressed in his usual extravagant manner, appeared upon the scene, and, going up to Maretzek Fisk accused him or being a thief and a scoundrel It seems that Maretzek did more than conduct Nilsson's concerts, he had charged Fisk that it was arranged for his passage to and from Europe Maretzek on being accused by his former employer of being a thief, rushed on him and struck out. Fisk parried the blows and returned the same with vigor and none the less skilful of the manly art, Maretzek came out of the fight with a black eye disfigured nose and displacement of clothing, while Fisk retired without a scratch, only slightly discomposed, but occasionally chuckling over his triumph and saying Maretzek, besides being ungrateful was a fool, whom he would whip if he ever had the occasion to approach him again

ACCIDENTS.—As the forms of the HERALD were being put to press yesterday morning, an accident caused the "piing" of the form containing the telegraphic news. This necessitated a delay of some time, but the page was filled with advertisements and the working of the edition commenced. A small portion had been worked off when—as if to verify the old saw about misfortunes never coming singly—our press broke down, and we were compelled to finish the balance at the office of the Long Roll. We regret the occurrence of the accident, since they are certainly as annoying to us as the lack of their daily paper can be to our patrons.

The services of Mr Bannister, foreman, and Mr. Jackson, of Bryan, Dillingham & Co.'s, were called in to repair the damaged machinery, and they succeeded in fixing up everything as good as new at an early hour last evening. As an evidence of the result, it may be mentioned, that they cast a brass pinion, the most complex piece about the press, worked it to the required dimensions, and had everything running smoothly by eight o'clock.

Varieties.

—Read the mammoth advertisement of the opening of W. H. Andrews' Dry Goods House

—The Jewish New Year commenced on Sunday night and ended on Tuesday night.

—The side-walk on the corner of Franklin and Spring streets has been relaid. The improvement was needed.

—"The Fire Place" is the name of a drinking saloon at Parkers. Any one can get warm by it for ten cents or red-hot for a quarter.

—The Democratic Senatorial conferees met at Corry yesterday. Up to the hour of going to press we had not learned the result of their deliberations.

—Attention is directed to the interesting letter of our Meadville correspondent, in another column. He sets forth the situation on the judicial question in so plain and incontrovertible a manner that "he who runs may read."

—And yet again we desire to impress upon our readers the fact that the Grand German Ball will take place at Corinthian Hall to-night. If the number of the tickets already sold is any indication, this will be the dance of the season.

—The thanks of the HERALD establishment are hereby tendered to Capt. Allan of the Long Roll, for the use of his press yesterday morning. While not wishing him any bad luck, we hope to have many opportunities for reciprocating.

—The many friends of Rev. W. P. Bignell, the popular pastor of the M.E. Church of this city, will be pleased to learn that the Conference has decided to return him to his present field of usefulness for another year. This action gives universal satisfaction.

GONE.—Hon. Walter H. Lowrie left for Meadville last evening, under the escort of his faithful henchman, C. M. Boush, Esq. He had intended remaining longer, but the reception he met with was so lukewarm that he concluded not to stand upon the order of his going but to depart quickly.

The Judge will tarry at Meadville until the day after election, when he will take up his line of march for Philadelphia, where he will doubtless muse over the folly of attempting to be a carpet-bag candidate for Judge of Crawford county. Peace attend him!

SOCIAL ENTERTAINMENT AT WARREN.—The ladies of the Presbyterian church and society at Warren, give a public entertainment this evening in Pascal Hall, for the benefit of their parsonage fund. The exercises will consist in part of tableaux and music, with scenes from the "Old Curiosity Shop." Refreshments will be served. We learn that a number of visitors will be present from Titusville.

The Signs of the Times in Titusville.

The building mania which set in with the early Spring has not yet subsided. At the commencement of the season there was an active demand for building lots, which continued till midsummer, when the building season had so far advanced that there was a temporary subsidence in real estate transactions. Meanwhile the material expansion of the town had been a matter of general wonder and congratulation. There has been no time within a period of five years that has witnessed so rapid an augmentation of population, or more promising indications of a fixed prosperity. Some three hundred new dwelling houses have been erected during the season, and upon nearly all of our central business streets have sprung up substantial brick edifices which would be creditable to any city in the State. A reasonable estimate of the capital invested in new buildings this year places it at not less than $350,000.

We believe the present season marks a new era in the history of our thriving city. A few weeks ago our railroad interests assumed a new phase and fresh give stimulus to material enterprise. Every sagacious citizen foresees in the completion of the Union and Titusville Railroad, and the early costruction of the Titusville and Tidioute Railroad, with the important connections which they involve, the inauguration of a new state of things—the opening of new fields of commercial activity, and the establishment of industrial enterprises upon a solid and permanent foundation. It has been the want of railroad facilities that has crippled and retarded our material progress. Capital accumulating here has of necessity been forced into other channels and assisted to build up more favored localities. The Refining business, which from every natural consideration should be concentrated at Titusville, has been diverted to other points. Dependent upon a single line of railroad, there has been no encouragement for the proper development of our resources. Capital has been idle or sought other sources of investment, and the energies of the community have languished under an incubus from which there at times seemed no possible extrication. But, as we have seen, "the good time coming" is on the eve of fulfillment, and in view of the important projects already inaugurated or in contemplation, we may safely assert that no city in the State has so promising a future. Men of capital foresee it, and are liberally investing their means to the best advantage. Citizens who have hitherto neglected to secure a homestead are availing themselves of the present moderate prices of real estate to make good the omission. We say moderate prices, for notwithstanding the frequent complaint that speculators were "ruining" the place, we have never seen a time when there was less investment for speculative objects. Lot owners are selling almost exclusively to parties who intend building for their own accommodation, or to rent for business purposes. We have taken the pains to collect from various parties a statement of real estate transactions since our last report. The greater part of those appended occurred within the last week or fortnight. It is very probable that as many more building lots have been sold since our last record, of which we have no report.

Mr. Wm. Barnsdall has made the following sales on Mount Vernon and Prospect streets, recently laid out upon the southwestern section of the hill above Brook street:

Three lots to Ruland Bros.
Two lots to A. A. Aspinwall.
Three lots to H. B. Strong and C. C. Leonard.
Four lots to John A. Hall.
Five lots to James A. Hooper.
Two lots to A. H. Low.
One lot to L. H. King.
One lot to T. J. Young.
Twelve lots to S. H. Stowell.

Several of the above named parties have already broken ground for new residences, which will be completed during the present season. The site is a favorable one for either cottage or villa, sheltered from northern and eastern winds, and overlooking the entire valley.

Mr. R. M. Jackson furnishes the following list of sales:

To George F. Kuntz, 1 lot, E. Walnut street, $1,000.
Ezra Crossman, 1 lot, E. Walnut street, $1,000.
Jno. R. Jordan, 1 lot, E. Pine st. $900.
Josephine Royer, 1 lot, E. Pine street, $1,500.
J. L. Lowen, 1 lot, E. Walnut st., $1,000.
Walter Brassil and John Deegan, 3 lots on Kerr street, $1,050.
Rebecca R. Benton, 1 lot, E. Walnut street, $1,000.
Geo. Gillmor, 1 lot, S. Water st. $400.
Philip Hesch, 1 lot, Kerr street, $400.
Wm. Webber, 1 lot, E. Elm street, $450.
Chas. B. Maier, 1 lot, Kerr street, $400.
Henry J. Eberly, Kerr street, $400.
John McAllister, 1 lot, Water st., $400.

Dr. C. B. Hammond has sold the following lots for Fertig & Hammond, on Drake street, above Spruce:

To Anna Mueller, 2½ lots, $1,800.
To Bertha Gosline, 1 1-2 lots, $950.
To John Wesley Alexander, 2 lots, $1,300.
To Daniel O'Day, 1 lot, $700.
To Charles Grossman, 1 lot, $900.

Mr. A. L. Ackerman, house and lot on Washington street, to R. H. Sargent, of Petroleum Centre, $2,500.

Same, house and lot on Washington street, to Joseph Seep, $2,500.

J. H. Hendrickson to James Sanders of Tarr Farm, lot corner Monroe and Spruce streets, 75 by 180 feet, $3,500.

D. O. Wickham to Geo. S. Stewart, 2 lots on Perry street, $3,000.

J. D. McFarland to Geo. S. Stewart, 3 lots corner of Perry and Elm streets, $4,500.

Joseph Bannister to Wm. Schiewe, 60 by 120 feet on Pine street, $1,600.

Mr. Geo. J. Sherman furnishes the following sales:

From J. H. Broas to W. H. Abbott, 44 feet on Diamond street, extending to Pine street, $8,500.

From E. O. Emerson to W. H. Abbott, 60 by 120 feet, on Main and Second sts., $2,500.

From J. McKay to W. H. Abbott, 90 by 180 feet, on Main street, $2,500.

From Z. Waid to W. H. Abbott, building and lot adjoining Second National Bank, $8,500.

Rexford Pearce to —— Dean, of Boston, frame building and lot, corner Pine and Martin streets, $10,500.

It is the intention of Mr. Dean, we hear, to remove the present building on the above lot, and erect a three story brick.

John C. Bryan has sold ½ lot on Brown street to Charles Bryan, of Oil City, for $1,600.

Also two lots to Mrs. McMullen, on Main street, $2,000.

E. H. Chase to Alexander Weinberg, 30 by 70 feet, on Mechanic street, $700.

On Tuesday A. Gibbs sold to George S. Stewart, the brick store and lot adjoining Savings Bank on Franklin street, for $6,000. Yesterday E. H. Chase sold to Hoenig Brothers, lot on Diamond street, 44 feet front by 70 feet deep, for $10,000. It is the intention of Messrs. Hoenig to remove the present building and erect a three-story brick.

The following purchases were made yesterday by Roberts & Co:

W. W. Kingsland's ½ interest in Kingsland & Roberts block, $9,000.

W. W. Kingsland's ½ interest in building and ground occupied by Granger & Co., $9,000.

Also 14 lots in Coombs' Addition for $10,000.

There have been a number of other sales in Coombs' Addition of which we have no report.

Mrs. E. M. Moore has sold to John Fertig the property known as the Moore House lot, which has been unoccupied since the fire. Price, $8,000.

D. H. Cady and John Fertig have bought of Breed, Hancox & Co. the Titusville Mill and mill lot; consideration $35,000. It is understood the mill is to be removed to make room for the passenger depot of the Union & Titusville Railroad. The location could not be improved.

It would be premature to refer to various important business enterprises that have been projected in anticipation of a prosperous future. We think we may safely predict that the population of Titusville will be fully doubled within five years. To-day there are at least a score of families living in hotels, boarding houses and shanties who would be glad to secure moderate sized dwelling houses, for rent or by purchase—and this class of persons is constantly added to our resident population. What we stand most in need of is a class of houses worth from $2,000 to $3,000 each, that can be rented at from $200 to $300 per year, to accommodate an essential element of the city's progress. And we therefore renew our suggestion for the organization of a building association that shall in some measure supply this important want.

—A tree was cut in Brady township, Clearfield county, recently, which measured 21 feet 2 inches in circumference, and cut eighteen sixteen feet logs and three twelve feet, and sealed 11,000 feet.

—Half a mile a day is the rate at which they are laying the track on the Dunkirk & Warren Railroad.

—Conrad Smith, a blacksmith by trade, residing on the railroad track in the city of Meadville, has been missing since Sunday morning last. He had been sick and unable to work for some days, and on Sunday morning arose, dressed himself in his working suit, told his wife he was going out and would be back in about half an hour. His dog went with him and returned in the allotted time, but no knowledge of the man's whereabouts can be obtained.

DRILLING TOOLS FOR JAPAN.—Messrs Bryan, Dillingham & Co. received yesterday an order from Yokohama, Japan, for a complete set of drilling tolls. They leave New York by steamer October 5. The same purchasers call for a price list of all manufactures pertaining to oil wells, which is an intimation that the Japanese will test their oil territory in the orthodox fashion.

We may add that the same firm have previously filled orders from other remote sections—having shipped one set of drilling tools to San Francisco; two sets to the Union Pacific Railroad company in Oregon; several sets to Illinois, North Carolina and South Carolina, and six sets to Chili, South America. They also filled an order for an engine and a complete set of well tools for an oil operator in Nova Scotia. The disadvantage of the Nova Scotian was that having "broke down" and left his tools fast in the well, he was obliged to return to Titusville to get a valve socket before he could repair damages! We hope better luck will attend the Japanese. The fact of their sending to Bryan, Dillingham & Co. for their supplies shows the value of advertising, and speaks well for the circulation of the HERALD among our friends, the Japs.

FIRE ALARM.—About two o'clock yesterday afternoon the fire alarm was sounded, and a dense smoke proceeding from near the corner of Franklin and Spring streets made known the location. The department turned out promptly, but fortunately the fire was extinguished without calling the services of the engines into requisition. It appears that the alarm was caused by the accidental overturning of a kettle of roofing composition which was being heated on a stove in the Ralph block. The fluid found its way into the flames, and at once ignited, but to the great relief of all the occupants of the frame buildings in the vicinity there was more smoke than fire.

PETROLEUM ITEMS.—The new well struck a day or two since, upon the James Kerr farm, Church Run, is doing fully thirty bbls of oil daily, and is owned by S. Fertig, P. T. Witherop, David Gray, and Jno. Wheaton. This well is located upon the west side of Church Run, upon what is supposed to be a continuation of the belt containing the Cadwallader, Tribune, and other producing wells, and is outside of any territory heretofore producing.

A new well was struck at West Hickory the first of the week, this is pumping fully 380 barrels every twenty-four hours. It is owned by Messrs. Grandin and Neyhart.

OPENING DAY.—On Saturday next, the new wholesale and retail dry goods establishment of W. H. Andrews, in the Shugart Block, Spring street, will be opened to the public. Mr. Andrews is an experienced merchant, having been engaged in the business for many years—for the last six years at Louisville, Ky.—and he has selected his stock, an entirely new one throughout, exclusively for this market. It will be his endeavor to furnish first-class goods at the most reasonable rates, while his assortments will be so extensive that the most particular cannot fail in finding something to suit their fancy.

Remember that this store will be opened on Saturday, and that all, the ladies more especially, are invited to call and examine goods, styles and prices.

MATTERS LOCAL AND GENERAL—VISIT OF JUDGE LOWRIE, THE DISTINGUISHED CARPET-BAGGER FROM PHILADELPHIA—HE HOLDS NUMEROUS RECEPTIONS—THEY ARE INDIFFERENTLY ATTENDED—PRESENT CONDITION OF THE CAMPAIGN, &C., &C.

Special correspondence of the Herald.

MEADVILLE, Sept. 20, 1870.

EDITORS HERALD:—The event of the past few days, though it hardly caused a ripple on the surface of affaire, was the arrival of Hon. Walter H. Lowrie, of Philadelphia, whom a certain clique of disappointed Republicans, aided by a portion of the Democratic party, are endeavoring to foist upon the people of Crawford county as President Judge for the next ten years. To the everlasting credit of the Democracy let it be recorded that they don't appear to take kindly to the importation, the entire burden of "rushing" the Judge about having devolved thus far upon the shoulders of the sore heads. And, indeed, why should a straight-laced Democrat be called upon to support a gentleman who has just arrived in our midst, with a carpet-bag in either hand? He is not the nominee of the party, nor has he ever been identified in any way, shape or manner, with the history or interests of Crawford county. He comes here from the extreme end of the State, say many of the leaders of the party, and he is now being used as a sort of utility man by a few demagogues, some of whom wanted the position themselves but were rejected by the Republicans as unfit for so exalted a place.

The Crawford Democrat, whose editor has shown much maudlin sympathy for the remnants of the Southern Confederacy who were being ridden to death by Northern carpet-baggers, has taken up the cudgel for a man who not only has never lived in the county, but asserts openly that in case of election he shall not remove his family from Philadelphia. A more barefaced instance of carpet-bagging north or south, has never been recorded in the annals of the fraternity. And in the eyes of these facts, and after having exhorted his readers for the past three or four years to regard the genus carpet-bagger as a species of vermin, this political acrobat turns a double somersault and asks the unterrified to vote for Judge Lowrie. Verily, politics oftentimes makes strange bed-fellows; but what disordered imagination could have ever conceived of the lying down together of the editor of the Democrat and a hated carpet-bagger?

As a few men who have heretofore acted with the Republican party were urging strenuously the claims of the Judge as the ne plus ultra of all legal knowledge, and one of the most eminent jurists of the land, your correspondent concluded the other day to look over the record of his career while on the Supreme Bench of Pennsylvania, and make a note of the result. After a careful review it was found that the most important opinions ever emanating from the learned gentleman were delivered during the war, and lo, the purport of these decisions is as follows:

In 1863, one Wm. F. Nichols filed a bill in equity, charging that his rights had been violated and his personal liberty invaded by defendant, a United States officer, known as a Provost Marshal. The bill concludes with a prayer for a writ of injunction against the defendant to restrain him from further proceedings with or under said enrollment or draft of citizens of the commonwealth. The motion for injunction was argued before a full bench on the part of the complainants, the defendant not appearing by counsel. The decision of the Court was that the law was unconstitutional. Lowrie C. J., delivering the opinion.

We next find the charge of the same Judge to a jury before which was brought the case of the proprietor of The Jeffersonian, a paper published at West Chester, Pa., vs. The U. S. Marshal and his deputies. The suit was brought to recover damages for the suppression of the complainant's journal, a paper notorious for its rebel sympathy and the aid and comfort it was furnishing the rebellion. The Judge charged that the plaintiff was clearly entitled to damages, which were accordingly returned to the amount of $512. Both these cases were appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the verdicts set aside.

And this is the record of a man who, afterwards repudiated by the people of the State for re-election to the Supreme Bench, now makes a pilgrimage into Northwestern Pennsylvania, and has the assurance to ask for the votes of loyal men! From his position on the bench, during the days of the nation's travail, did he endeavor to keep the ranks of the Union army from being refilled and use his utmost efforts to encourage the publication of rebel newspapers in the Keystone State!

This is a brief account of the antecedents of the Judge with the carpet-bag, but the half is not yet told, nor is it worth while to go more into details. He will sojourn with us until after the election, and then the places which have known him for a few brief weeks will know him no more.

With reference to the other offices there is no interest shown, and all the Republican nominees will poll the full party vote.

Yet again will you hear from your correspondent at MEADVILLE.

Our Petrolia Letter.

PETROLIA, Sept. 19, 1870.

Editors Morning Herald:

The Wyoming News Letter will be issued this week in Petrolia, under a new title, and will contain chiefly oil matter. I wish it every success.

Matters here, for the last fourteen days, have been very lively. A great many wells (in all about forty) are going down in the immediate vicinity of the Craise and Shoemaker wells. Territory around there is held very high, in fact $1000 per acre has been refused for some choice lots. The production for the last week has not exceeded six hundred barrels, this may be accounted for by the stoppage of the King wells, and others, for repairs. The Craise well is still doing some 300 barrels per day, the Cole not so well, something having gone wrong with it. The Perkins has settled down to some 30 barrels per day. The Prince No. 1, not yet tested, with a splendid show. The Reynold, nearly down, also bids fair to compete with either of the above, but has not yet been tested.

The shipments of oil and its products average about 33 car loads per day, with further inquiries for cars. The most of this is delivered in London, in the shape of crude, and in Hamilton, in distillate and ready for treatment for export. The export firms are doing their full capacity. Crude still holds firm at rather improved prices.

The northwest is not entirely given up. There are three wells going down northwest of the Shoemaker wells, one by a Mr. Lamb, of London, on lot 9, concession 12, of Enniskillen, from 140 [illegible]

These will fairly test the lands in this direction. All kinds of business here being very brisk.

Crude firm at $1 60 to $1 75 per bbl.

Refined at 21c to 22½c per gal.

Card.

The Mathews Hotel and Restaurant establishment has passed into the hands of Weil Bros., formerly the popular and well known proprietors of the Lager Beer Temple of Rochester, N. Y. Their style of business was always first-class. Their bar and table was furnished with the best of the market. They now propose to make this already popular resort more attractive by giving additional care and attention to all the departments. The best qualities only of ales, wines, liquors and cigars will be kept. Frank Arne, always courteous and affable, will have charge of the bar. Mr. John W. Smith has taken charge of the dining hall, and already established a reputation as an A No. 1 caterer. He will spare no pains or expense to make his rooms the most popular in the city.

TRADE MARK

EARTH CLOSETS.

IMPORTANT TO ALL.

The Earth Closet is a perfect substitute for the WATER CLOSET It may be used in any room or must be substituted for the COMMON PRIVY

It is inodorous, Cheap and Simple.

The following letter to the Buffalo agents of the Earth Closet Company was written by the Rev A. H. Lewis, of Alfred Centre, New York under date of May 3 1870

I have Earth Closet fixtures of the pattern, put up in the form of a permanent room over a simple box which holds a barrel and can be emptied with a shovel when ever it is desired The expense here and the cost of fixtures, was about one days work for a carpenter, and the little lumber needed much less than even an out-door closet of the usual offensive style.

It has been in constant use since November last by a family of four or five persons, the coal barrel by the family furnishing all the earth required.

"The results may be summed up as follows 1—About one barrel per month of superior fertilizing material 2—The absence of all offensive odors incident to the ordinary "water-closet" 3—In short, after a trial of six or seven months I can heartily recommend the Dry Earth System as being the cheapest, most effective most convenient, and healthiest system with which I am acquainted I would not exchange my own made for a water-closet system, and an outside door privy is not to be mentioned"
